VIN DE SOIF

---

Wine to drink. Wine to refresh, wine to cleanse, wine to replenish. Wines that reverberate, wine you can't get enough of, but can almost always find. Wines that are exciting, wines that are not precious, but the fermented juice of grapes. Wines that do as they please.

CHARDONNAY FLINT TO FLESH

No other white grape can claim to be as regal as Chardonnay. She is the undisputable Queen unless you ask around in Germany. Tree fruit and flint and sweet baking spice and fleshy citrus and hawthorne and almond and tropical fruit and hazelnut and melons and cheese rind and hot sun on a sidewalk after a thunderstorm. « I don't like Chardonnay » - Fool

Wines to drink. Wines made so well they're gone. Wines with personality, wines with energy. Wines that reflect a place and a vintage. Wines that take themselves as seriously as the poem below. Wines that are honest.

CELERY.

« Celery tastes tastes where in curled lashes and little bits and mostly in remains.

A green acre is so selfish and so pure and so enlivened »

- Gertrude Stein

SYRAH

---

Black pepper and raw steak. Violets and terracotta clay. Not jet black Shiraz but beautiful ruby-pink Syrah. Wines you can see through and smell from across the room. The perfect balance of power and elegance.

PINOT NOIR

---

First written about in 1375 Pinot Noir has been cultivated for likely 2000 years. Peanut shells and cranberries. Violets and bramble fruit. Potpourri and tea leaves and dried herbs and clove and anise and wet forest floor and vanilla bean and smoke and rhubarb and caramel. Often misdescribed as light bodied by fools.

BORDEAUX & BORDEAUX BLENDS

---

The wine of Kings for over a thousand years. Claret to the Brits, drank like water for just as long. Intoxicating rich perfumed dark fruit and dried flowers. Lush cassis and kirsch, brandied cherries and bell pepper. Sweet baking spice and the darkest potting soil you've ever set eyes on and a very old barn. Enough tannin to chew your bœuf for you.
